And after the prompt action taken by the King of Saxony in the case of Mr. Davis, are we not fully warranted in believing that the Emperor of Austria fully approves of Mr. Belmont's course—that he is himself decidedly a Pierce and King man—and that he is very much rejoiced at the zeal and activity shown by his representative here, on their behalf?

But however this may be, the facts are

CRECKERED STORE.

The superior manner is which feey are mane—the fashionable style of their cut and workmanship—the quality of the material, and the variety of shades and colors they are composed of, would induce you to say without hesitation that the proprietors must be untiring in their relores and their ingeomity more than common, to collect such a quantity of beautiful germents together. And the best of all is, the UNUSUAL LOW PRICES THEY ARE SOLD

Would almost make you swear that you would never buy a yard of stuff in a store to have made up for yourseltor the boys. If you buy a suit of clothes, you see the fit—the quality of the goods—nodall dones in a few minutes, with little trouble, before you pay one cent of your money. Notwithstanding once of our modest, unessuming neighbors will raise their voice and caution you, very piously, against the production of 'Eastern Slop Shops' Think of it. Who would suppose it—such a brilliant suggestion: Ohi what a besu your granny was! Wonder why they did not warn you against done-rite Slops—wery old patterns, and perforated cloths. Thus a stroll a slong Main street and me the figure we cut. You will conclude poor Old Mother Gene is in such demand, she will be compelled to hide herself or every the coath. What Parision Crooks we have got of late in the shape of old women and shop boys; pure chartily for the Irish friends, I suppose, has brought them of; well, well this is the age of progression, caralainly. To be candid, those who want to save as much in the purchase of a suit of clothes, as will give the child half a year's schooling would do well to call at the OLD CHIECKERED STORE where you can be fitted out from head to foot, out or those pilea of clothing we have stored away. What we sell you we warrant in every particular. If anything happens to be wrong in your purchase, return the goods, and select irom our stocks fresh supply. It is use less to mention the variety of our FOR.
